ANY WAY YOU LIKE IT ...

… is a window treatment that allows users to tailor their light needs in a novel way.

BROOKLYN, NY—Any Way You Like It, a unique approach to window treatments, provides both horizontal and vertical slats to create a visually appealing combination. Unlike window treatments currently available which are only horizontal or vertical, with Any Way You Like It the top and bottom portions of the windows can be adjusted separately, allowing greater control in adjusting the light source either on the top or on the bottom (or both).

The patent pending Any Way You Like It was invented by Brenda S. of Brooklyn, NY. She said, “With traditional blinds the only way to alter the light source is by either widening or narrowing the space between the slats, but the Any Way You Like It series allows users to separately adjust the top and/or bottom at different times during the day. When the sun is higher in the sky the top portion can be completely closed, blocking the blinding light, while the bottom portion can remain open allowing in enough light to illuminate one’s space. Another bonus is that during winter, one can use the sun to warm a home instead of turning up the heat, without being blinded by unwanted light. The same goes for the summer, when air conditioning costs can be cut by blocking out the sun.”
